The Upsidedown Poison Mishap

Not so long ago, in a not so far away galaxy, there was an upside down planet with green skies. In the middle of a dense forest called the Norest there was a giant Digital City with lots of sewers where mutants lived. The mutants were accompanied by lots of koalas.

The Norest was filled with vicious rose vines that had magnetic forces to help them climb and to trap the upside down birds and insects they fed on. The Norest was also home to Zirrafes and hologram raisin bugs. In the Digital City, evil lions lived in electronics and could trap you in the digital world with their eyes.

There was a tar river that ran through the city and once it reached the forest it became a poison that turned animals to mutants. There was a melted chocolate ocean with a whirlpool that generated muffin-delivering clouds. The musical notes stream and waterslide rivers connected it all together.

In this world there were people who hunted the mutants and turned them into flowers, they got to travel around with pocket push button teleporters (though they worked slowly when it was hot). Most everyone else got around in triple decker hover buses that had beds and kitchens.

Yuri Masaku lived in a mansion in the Norest with his pet ziraffe. He could transform between a 7 foot tall, 19-year-old man with an afro into a lion and into an invisible digital force. Because of his connection to nature, if the Norest and Digital City were destroyed he would be as well.

One of Yuri's friends was Dr. Jack Dog Pack Jr., or Dr. Jr. for short. It looked like a dog-shaped chocolate chip cookie but in the mirror it just saw a human. It lived in a wizard-built cookie jar home surrounded by wizard magic and booby traps. It was a dog commander, could fly fast, and had wizard powers that helped it from being eaten (since it looked like a cookie). Its mother made medicine out of the flowers that used to be mutants and they were a huge help to Yuri.

Yuri might have been safe except for Master Croc who could transform into Sugar Cube, Mac, Macky Mult, or any animal. He lived in a sewer under the forest, had super strength and a fish shooter that allowed him to control people with fish bites. Yuri had accidentally pushed Master Croc into the poison river and he would never forgive him.

Norsy was a 9-year-old who looked like a 5 foot tall human child but had rose vine hair. She had magical powers that could make others obey her. Master Croc was her father and she lived with him and helped him plot his revenge.

One day Dr. Jr. went to Yuri's forest mansion for a nice friendly visit but right after it arrived they both heard a banging at the door. They looked out the window to see Master Croc and Norsy outside.

"Let me in, we have unfinished business!" yelled Master Croc.

"What should we do?" asked Dr. Jr.
Just then...
