

The LOST

SON OF

RAINBOW

WATER

An original of
Ms. Guevara's 5th grade class
at El Sol Elementary
in conjunction with Read And Write Kalamazoo

A Division of Geological & Musicological Survey Co. Publications
Copyright 2018

Published March 21st, 2018

For more information about Read And Write Kalamazoo's literacy focused programs, please visit www.readandwritekzoo.org

Today's Story Helpers Are:
Leader: Jason Conde
Illustrator: Emily Kastner
Typist: Victoria Marcetti
Support: Jess Fales, Nichole Weststrate, John Ephland, Sofia De Jong

This publication was supported by

BINGEN
& ASSOCIATES<sub>INC.</sub>

The Last Son of Rainbow Water

There was once a place that, at first glance, seemed a lot like Earth. There were jungles, deserts, and forests, but all of the trees were strangely whimsical, almost as if someone had stretched them out and reshaped them. It was almost always cold enough to see your breath but the air smelled like grass. The dark skies were filled with orange and purple clouds that would rush in with unexpected tornados and storms at a moment's notice or part quickly to let through bursts of intense sunlight.

The plants in this place all came falling from the sky and once a month they birthed unicorns whose emotions could change the colors of the clouds. In the dark the plants appeared to be black but in the sunlight they were rainbow colored and lit up. All the plants had eyes, ears, and brains, but only some of them could see. In Poison Palace Forest, (a forest where the plants grew to resemble a palace) the plants were unpredictably poisonous.

The Poison Palace Forest was home to majestic monsters that were as big as five 5th-graders. They didn't have any legs but they didn't need them because they had wings and were always flying. Their wings and hammer-shaped heads were covered in fur but the rest of their bodies were hairless. They had pelican mouths that could scoop up humans who didn't heed their terrifying calls of "oofity oofity!"

The places that seemed like they should be filled with water flowed with a rainbow liquid that smelled like lemonade. There was fruit that floated in the water and on nights when the moon was out they opened up to release glowing purple hearts. If one decided to eat the fruit they would either be rewarded with a prize, or given a task to complete. If given a task, vines would grow from your body to help you fly and complete your task.

There were a lot of ways to get around, including magic shoes, giant rainbow horses, shapeshifting animals, and python-unicorns.

This world was home to a man named Jasonah, or Jason for short. He had dark hair, was average height, and wore a gold mask with his name on it. He had a house in the clouds as well as an underground lair. A fruit he ate had given him super heat-vision, ice breath, and the ability to write a book in one second. Jasonah grew up with a mean father and was determined to be good to his own child. However, his child was taken and now he had begun a quest to save all the children from danger.

Jasonah knew an alien named Thingy who he thought was his friend. Thingy was a shapeshifter and had a split face that showed the good and evil in him, it was blue when he was being good and red when we was being evil. He lived in a den under a lake and in this space he plotted against everyone, including Jasonah. Thingy had been abandoned by his mother and all the sadness and anger inside him drove him to make others feel sad and mad, too. He was the one who took Jasonah's child, but he never told him because he wanted to stay close by to keep an eye on Jasonah's quest for good. Thingy had a shapeshifting pet that was a unicorn but turned to a dragon for evil purposes.

Tiknolyndo was truly Jasonah's ally. They were a curly green-haired boy at night and a curly red-haired girl during the day. They had all-white eyes, a really big mouth, and elf ears. They were camouflaged and had tricking abilities to help them hide in their home in the rainbow water. They liked to help Jasonah by providing helpful fruit and hinder their enemies by giving them fruits that would slow them down.

Jess Rosie Poison was known to help her cousin Thingy out with his evil plans. Jess wore a black and red mask and never let anyone see her face except for her red eyes. She had green skin and short black hair and lived on a black sand beach with a black unicorn that she could ride around. She was immortal, could shapeshift from small to giant as needed, and enjoyed killing any plants that weren't poisonous.

One day Jess and Thingy were hanging out and spotted Jasonah and Tiknolyndo and decided it was time to enact their most evil plan...

ALWAYS FLYING
←

AS BIG AS FIVE
5TH GRADERS
←

MAGICAL
←

Handwriting practice lines on the left page, consisting of 14 horizontal dashed lines.

Handwriting practice lines on the right page, consisting of 8 horizontal dashed lines.