A World Divided

Far away was a world torn in two, half dark and scary where it was hard to move and breathe amid the many flames. On this side of the world there was an evil black swiss cheese moon. On the other half of the world it was light and bright with a sun like a dandelion. This magical world was made almost entirely of candy (save for the Pizza City) and in it animals and zombies lived harmoniously. It often smelled like a mix between beautiful flowers...and their fertilizer. A milk river spotted with lollipop lillipads and gummy frogs flowed between grape mountains, a cotton candy tree forest, and a snow covered pink hill. A bridge over the river was home to dragons and goblins and one glittery pink road led to a massive pink house.

Many interesting plants dotted the landscape including flowers that shot juice if you squished the petals, plants that grew french fries, patches of people-eating plumber plants, plants that grew blue scrunchies and could turn your hair into an afro if you touched it, a talking tree big enough to live in, and a farting tree that grew chicken nugget bucks.

Not to be outdone, the animals were equally as interesting. There were chocolate deer and bunnies that never aged and could regrow any parts that happened to be eaten off. There were also two types of dragons- one helpful who blew glitter and had pretzel horns, the other had fire in their eyes and often protected castles. Don't forget about the rainbow sloths and koalas who gave warm hugs and loved taking selfies and saying 'I love you'.

A sweet network of rivers flowed throughout the world, rivers of sugar, syrup, and sports drink. There was a chocolate waterfall with a mysterious room behind it. One root beer river was often dotted with ice cream float boats and lollipop surfboards. Surrounding the Water Kingdom was pixelated water, a caramel lake, and special healing water that healed all ailments. There were many ways to get around this world. There were horses and birds with saddles that were especially good for getting around the darkside. Each person had access to a single-person jet pack that they kept in their backyards, there was a rocket you could ride, and there were floating cars that has foam

This fantastical world was home to Erik Lightning Speed. He was very thin, had light skin, braces, and white hair sticking straight up. He was quite clumsy, didn't wear shoes, and often slipped on the ice. His favorite color to wear was navy blue and he wore a beanie that had no pom. His sword arms were tattooed with black patterns, his nose was pierced, he had a lightning bolt on his cheek, and he wore hearing aids that also played music. He had ice powers that shot from his hands in shards, he was super fast, and he could do double back-flips. He couldn't be seen on the dark side but he was stuck there and couldn't escape. Bobbi Boi was Erik's pet. He was a jet-pack wearing giant dog with tan fur and sharp teeth. He wore sunglasses and a t-shirt that said, 'SuperBobbi'.

He lived in the massive pink house and had his own burger joint inside with an arcade and a secret room made of chicken nuggets. Bobbi was extremely smart and could read minds, shoot lightning from his teeth, and do tons of back-flips in a row.

Queen Dawna and King Dusk also lived on the dark side in a castle with a secret underground lair protected by gingerbread men. Dawna had dark skin and long black hair and wore a purple cloak. Dusk had pale skin, short blonde hair, and wore a black cloak. Both had dragon wings but preferred to ride their dragons rather than fly. They were the head of a secret organization created with the quest to find all seven lollipop rings that would allow them to take over the world. They knew one of those rings was somewhere in the mysterious space hidden behind that waterfall.

Hope Grace Johnson, or Spike, lived in a pineapple behind the Queen and King's castle. She was shy with blue eyes, thick arched eyebrows, blue braces, and glasses. Due to an accident where she lost her arm, she had a robotic arm that shot lasers. Her greatest superpower was being herself...and she was a SPY! She was secretly Erik's long lost sister but pretended to be part of the Queen and King's secret organization.

One day Erik and Bobbi Boi were out for a walk on the dark side trying to figure out how to get Erik over to the light side until they noticed a line of suspicious people heading to the Queen and King's castle. There must be a meeting of their secret organization! As they approached the castle, Queen Dawna, King Dusk, and Spike threw open the front doors...
